Farmville part 2

Super salmon would be first transgenic animal on table

They may not be the 500-pound “Frankenfish” that some researchers were talking about 10 years ago, but a Massachusetts company says it is on the verge of receiving federal approval to market a quick growing Atlantic salmon that’s been genetically modified.

Though genetically engineered crops such as corn and soybeans have been part of the American diet for several years, if the Food and Drug Administration approves it, the salmon would be the first transgenic animal headed for the dinner table.

AquaBounty, which calls its super salmon an “advanced hybrid” rather than a transgenic fish, said they’re safe to eat and would be raised in contained farming operations that could be based inland rather than along coastal waters.

Here’s a look at the current state of high-tech fish and other food production. MCT

AquaBounty says its super salmon is safe to eat.

NAME OF THE GAME

Aquaculture (n.)—An $86 billion-a-year business, with nearly half of all fish consumed globally farm raised. As wild stocks dwindle and the world’s population heads toward 9 billion, fish farmers will be looking for fish that will be market-ready quicker.

Scientists are working on cattle that would be resistant to mad cow disease.

About 330 million acres of biotech crops are planted globally, an 80-fold increase since 1996.

Biotech crops are spreading worldwide, with 14 million farmers growing them in 25 countries, including the U.S.

Researchers in Canada are developing an “enviropig” that would produce manure with less harmful levels of phosphorus.

AquaBounty salmon eggs

HOW IT WORKS

AquaBounty’s fish grow faster but not bigger than normal Atlantic salmon. Company researchers have added a growth hormone gene from the Chinook salmon as well as an on-switch gene from the ocean pout, a distant relative of the salmon, to a normal Atlantic salmon’s roughly 40,000 genes. Salmon normally feed only during the spring and summer, but when the on-switch from the pout’s gene is triggered, they eat year-round. The result is a transgenic salmon that grows to market size in about half the time as a normal salmon—16 to 18 months, rather than three years.

AquaBounty makes a quick growing, genetically modified Atlantic salmon.

ONE CONTROVERSY

Farmed salmon are raised in net pens in coastal waters along Washington state, Maine and British Columbia. Most commonly, the fish being raised are Atlantic salmon, and the fear is they’ll escape and compete with endangered native stocks. By some estimates, between 400,000 and 1 million Atlantic salmon have escaped into the wild from the 75 or so net-pen operations in British Columbia.

By one estimate, 77 percent of the global soybean harvest was transgenic, 26 percent of the feed corn, 21 percent of canola and 49 percent of cotton.

All told, according to estimates, there are 60 to 70 transgenic crops ranging from papayas to yellow squash.

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@joeldavid moore: This just in: Jail has been sentenced to 90 days of Lindsay Lohan.

Next up: LeBron joins Friendster

There's fashionably late, and then there's just plain late to the party. Let's face it, pretty much any celebrity not yet on Twitter has completely missed the boat. And surely no one would follow someone so out of touch with reality, right?

Wrong. Of course I'm wrong.

The man with the biggest head in all the world, LeBron James, decided he needed to see for himself what all the fuss is about. And in perfect Oprah style, with a tweet so boring it's almost unforgivable, @KingJames entered the Twitterverse at twitter.com/kingjames.

In just over a week, he's raked in hundreds of thousands of followers. In other news, I'm up to 2,655 followers after almost two years of hard work. That and I still can't dunk.

I'll cut LeBron a little slack, though. He had a decision to make that no one would want: where to spend the rest of his career and how many millions he wanted to make.

So that got me thinking. What other celebrities aren't on Twitter who actually belong on Twitter? Here's a list for starters.

STEVE JOBS: He doesn't have a Twitter account, at least that we know of. I'm convinced Jobs is active on Twitter under some sort of pseudonym like Fred Macgillicuddy and he tweets from the iPhone.

MICHAEL JORDAN: Dude, last week was your time. Folks are comparing LeBron to you and while they might think he's like Mike, he's no Mike. You should have set that big head straight.

BP CEO TONY HAYWARD: In all fairness, nothing Hayward could tweet would top the amazing comedy of the fake BP Twitter feed called @BPGlobalPR. People thought it was actually BP tweeting, but it turns out, it's just a joke. Recent example: "Our oil hit Texas beaches yesterday. Fortunately, in 20 years, their school books will say nothing happened. #bpcare."

PRINCE: Last week he gave an exclusive interview to London's Daily Mirror and didn't mince words. "The Internet's completely over," he said, comparing it to MTV, which he said was once hip but suddenly became outdated. And then there's this gem: "Anyway, all these computers and digital gadgets are no good." I'm pretty sure his raspberry beret is on way too tight, but that doesn't mean he shouldn't come to his senses and tweet about how much he hates the Internet. Oh, the irony.

What about you? Who's one person not on Twitter you'd like to see there? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. And if you talk the person into it, please get him or her to follow me!

Hop, skip, jump

Some Chicago professionals don't think twice about switching careers in shaky job market

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Mimosa Shah acts like a free agent in the working world.

She is under no contract or obligation to stick with one job for the long haul. She's free to check out her options and consider other job offers. And she has.

In the past two years, she's bounced around to four jobs: volunteer coordinator for two political campaigns, literacy coordinator for a community-based organization and—her current gig—community engagement coordinator for the Chicago Cultural Alliance.

"The benefit of job hopping, so to speak, is each time I changed jobs, I moved on for something: better pay, opportunity and mobility," said Shah, 32, of Logan Square. With each job jump, she became exposed to new people, places and mentors, she said.

"I find that fulfilling, while to a traditionalist it may seem like somebody who doesn't know what they want," she said.

Job hoppers, like Shah, flee from office to office or leap from gig to gig in a relatively short span. Some switch after months and others after a couple of years, citing the need to change careers, beat a round of imminent layoffs or find fulfilling jobs.

Many job hoppers appear to be millennials. A 2008 survey by Experience, a career services provider for college students and alumni, showed 70 percent of recent grads left their first job within two years and 60 percent said they were looking for a new job.

Last month, The Associated Press reported more workers quit their jobs in the previous three months than were laid off. Despite Illinois' unemployment rate of 10.8 percent for May, which is slightly higher than the national rate of 9.5 percent, skipping out is a reality that may become more popular as better jobs emerge when the economy rebounds, experts say.

The short-timers can scare off employers because bosses fear such workers will leave them quickly, chasing another opportunity,

Michael Fineman has had three jobs in six years. Fineman left one job in search of a better work-life balance and quit another because of looming layoffs. ANDREW A. NELLES PHOTO FOR REDEYE employment experts said.

"The feeling is if they've left two or three jobs in six, seven, eight, nine, twelve months, they're going to leave here," said Tom Gimbel, CEO of the LaSalle Network, a staffing and recruiting firm downtown. "They're malcontent, never going to be happy. So why take a chance on them?"

Turnover is expensive for companies, he said. Companies spend money to post the job and recruit job candidates, and time on the interview process and training a new employee, Gimbel said. Morale in the workplace can also be affected when employees quit, he said.

Having more than one job lasting less than 12, and sometimes 18, months is seen as a warning sign, he said. Companies find job stability attractive in applicants. A job seeker with 10 years of experience under his or her belt should have held one job for five years, he said. Some companies won't even talk to an applicant if he or she is seen as a job hopper unless the company is looking to fill a temporary job, he said.

But there's an upside to job hopping, said Raven Moore, 30, a legal assistant who lives in Bucktown. Hoppers often are multitaskers who can learn quickly, want to enhance their skills and challenge themselves to move to the next level, she said. She counts seven jobs in six years.

However, jumping jobs can be stressful if workers lack focus and can't define what they want to do next, she said. Moore decides to get another job when she feels the learning curve has flattened.

"I think people respect job hopping as long as you're able to illustrate you can get stuff done. Good work is about execution," Moore said. "If you're able to showcase you get things done and produce good work, people won't care if you job hop," she said.

Young workers are constantly looking for better opportunities and have seen how companies are not loyal to employees in this economy and question why they as workers should be loyal to companies, said Lindsey Pollak, author of "Getting from College to Career."

"The whole paradigm of how we work is completely changing. That old model of get one job out of college till you retire with a gold watch is completely, utterly gone," Pollak said.

When she talks to college students and recent grads about their careers, they tend to think of a one- or two-year plan.

"Much more now than ever, people are thinking about their job as an extension of who they are," Pollak said. They want their work to represent who they are and be fulfilling, she said. "They're much quicker to jump around and find something meaningful," she said.

Job hopping is common for Michael Fineman's industry of venture capital and private equity. He snagged three jobs in a period of six years. Fineman, 28, left one job in search of a better work-life balance and quit another because of looming layoffs. He quit last month at Maranon Capital, where he had a two-year stint to pursue an MBA at the University of Chicago.

While his job moves have been lateral in terms of responsibility, "compensation has improved as I've gone from job to job, the general experiences and types of things I'm doing on the job has certainly changed," said Fineman, who lives in the Gold Coast. His change in jobs gave him the opportunity to expand his network of contacts and skill set, he said.

The downside to being a job hopper is explaining every time why he made the career moves. "As long as it's explainable and not performance-based, then it becomes more acceptable," Fineman said.

While there's an adjustment period of getting settled into a new job, Shah, who works in the not-for-profit sector, said her bumpy career path has been worthwhile.

"Regardless of all these job experiences, I've been able to grow as a person and that's important to me, more than anything else," she said.

SO WHERE ARE THEY GOING?

In and out of Chicago

"The city tends to attract young adults in their 20s, but then loses substantial numbers of people in their 30s and 40s. Similar patterns of migration exist in other big large urban cores like New York, Boston, Denver. Certainly a significant part of this migration stream—both into and out of the city—are moving for employment related reasons." —Kenneth Johnson, senior demographer at the Carsey Institute at the University of New Hampshire, in an e-mail.

Lots of job leaps will bring questions

What will employers think about your job-hopping experience?

Companies will notice frequent job changes on a resume, so it's best to address it, said Lindsey Pollak, 35, New York-based author of "Getting from College to Career."

"Explain to me what you learned from doing that, why are you smarter, wiser, more prepared and self-knowing because you've been through that experience," Pollak said. An interviewee can talk about why this job opportunity would be a better fit than previous jobs, she said.

When employers ask what the applicant's five-year plan is, that's a clue that what's really being asked is how long he or she plans to stay with the company, she said. An applicant should never say he or she plans to leave and instead should talk about intentions for the company, such as contributing to the organization and helping to build something great there, she said. Also, she advises an applicant to make contact with potential employers to get them excited about the job seeker before submitting a resume.

If a worker gets the itch to switch jobs often or craves change, he or she may be best suited for entrepreneurship or start-up environments in which there often are new tasks and challenges. Applicants also can inquire about movement within the company, she said.

"There's nothing wrong with jumping around a little bit. It's the excessive looking for the next exciting thing that can be problematic," Pollak said. LEONOR VIVANCO, REDEYE

'Transformers' storms Chicago

Cast and crew walk through the make-believe destruction Sunday on LaSalle Street during a break in shooting for "Transformers 3." LaSalle from Jackson Boulevard to Wacker Drive was scheduled to be closed until 5 a.m. Monday, according to the city Office of Emergency Management and Communications. Washington Street from Wells to Clark streets and Randolph Street from Wells to Wacker closed Saturday at 6 a.m. and were to reopen at 5 a.m. Monday. Crews will be shooting on Michigan Avenue later in the week (the street will be closed Thursday night and re-open at 5 a.m. Monday). Reportedly, crews will film some of their noisier scenes that include explosions and gunfire. ALEX GARCIA/TRIBUNE

Confusion over E. coli alert

Chicago Tribune

Swim advisories were issued Sunday at 10 Lake Michigan beaches because of high levels of E. coli bacteria, but swimmers at one beach weren't properly alerted for about two hours and lifeguards there said they weren't aware of the warning.

A green flag waved at Oak Street Beach from 11 a.m. to about 1 p.m., signaling that the water was supposedly at its safest for the roughly four dozen swimmers splashing near the shore.

But most recent water tests indicated that E. coli bacteria levels were high enough to warrant a swim advisory, which means swimming is permitted but everyone in the water should exercise caution—especially children, the elderly and anyone with a compromised immune system.

There should have been a yellow flag alerting the public that water conditions weren't ideal, Chicago Park District officials said.

Lifeguards and park district employees there said they weren't aware the beach was under an advisory.

The green flag was swapped with a yellow one about two hours after the beach opened, after the Tribune started asking questions of park officials.

Park district officials said they fixed the problem as soon as they were made aware.

But several swimmers who already were in the lake before the flags were changed were aggravated that they weren't properly alerted to water conditions.

"We really would have gone somewhere else," said 41-year-old John Panozzo of Beverly, as his sons Luke, 6, and Leo, 4, played in the water. "We're sensitive to that."

His wife, Dawn McHugh, said she had checked the park district's website before coming to the beach. While she read about the swim advisory online, she found the wording confusing:

"A swim advisory is in effect when certain conditions require that caution should be exercised when swimming. These include weather patterns or water conditions. Monitor the flag color and follow lifeguards' instructions if asked to get out of the water," the website said.

McHugh assumed the problem was due to weather or choppy waves and had no idea the swim advisory was connected to bacteria. Then the green flag added to the confusion.

Man killed while racing on expressway

A man was killed and two other people were injured Sunday in a crash on the Eisenhower Expressway following a race between two cars. About 2:40 a.m., police responded to the crash on westbound Interstate 290 at Oakley Boulevard.

2 dead, others hurt in shootings over weekend

Two people were dead and eight others were wounded in street violence incidents late Saturday and early Sunday morning around the city, police said. At least 19 people were wounded in shootings since Friday.

Woman struck, killed by train

A woman was killed Sunday after being struck by an Amtrak train on the Northwest Side. The incident happened sometime after noon near Irving Park Road and Kilbourn Avenue.

Man pulled from Lake Michigan

A 24-year-old man was in good condition after he was pulled out of Lake Michigan on Sunday. The man had to be rescued from the water at North Avenue Beach at about 5:30 a.m.

Services set for slain officer

A memorial service for slain Chicago police Officer Thor Soderberg has been set for Thursday, although a location has not been determined, the Police Department said Saturday. Soderberg was shot to death Wednesday afternoon.

Two bombings kill 64 in Uganda

8 KAMPALA, Uganda In simultaneous bombings bearing the hallmarks of international terrorists, two explosions ripped through crowds watching the World Cup final in two places in Uganda's capital late Sunday, killing 64 people, police said. Americans were among the casualties.

The deadliest attack occurred at a rugby club as people watched the game between Spain and the Netherlands on a largescreen TV outdoors. The second blast hit an Ethiopian restaurant, where Americans were wounded.

Kampala's police chief said he believed Somalia's most feared militant group, al-Shabab, could be responsible for the attack. Al-Shabab is known to have links with al-Qaida, and it counts militant veterans from the Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan conflicts among its ranks.

A head and legs were found at the rugby club, suggesting a suicide bomber may have been to blame, an Associated Press reporter at the scene said.

At least three Americans—part of a church group from Pennsylvania—were injured at the Ethiopian restaurant. One was Kris Sledge, 18, of Selinsgrove, Pa.

"I remember blacking out, hearing people screaming and running," Sledge said from the hospital. "I love the place here, but I'm wondering why this happened."

Still packing 'em in

9 Cinema-goers watch "Dilwale Dulhania Le Jayenge" ("The Big Hearted Will Take the Bride") on Sunday at the Maratha Mandir theater in Mumbai. The movie has set a record of 770 weeks of continuous screening at a cinema, a feat unmatched by any Bollywood movie. REUTERS

Crude oil flows as BP replaces cap

BP said Sunday that its attempt to place a new cap on its ruptured undersea well was proceeding as planned.

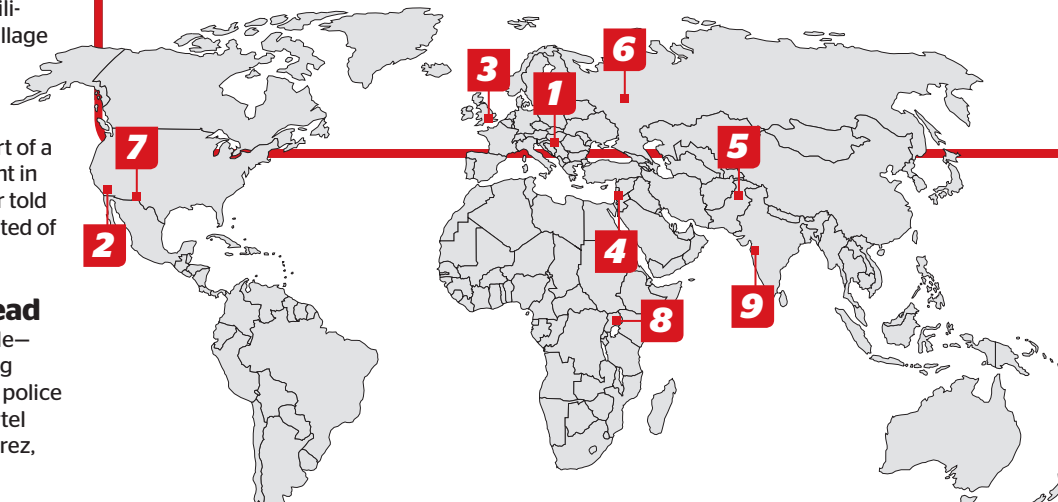

Officials hope the containment cap will stop oil from gushing into the Gulf. But while robots replace the old cap, crude is flowing freely.

Robots have removed the old cap in an operation that began Saturday, BP said in a statement Sunday.

The replacement is expected to take three to six days, BP senior Vice President Kent Wells said Sunday, with favorable weather helping the process along.

Officials have said such a fix would be temporary, and the permanent solution would still be completion of a relief well. There are two relief wells under construction, with one expected to be completed in August. One could intercept the leaking well as early as the end of July.

The old cap had been diverting about 630,000 gallons a day to a ship. BP is recovering 336,000 to 378,000 gallons per day through a line connected to another vessel.

WHITE HOT

SOX ENTER ALL-STAR BREAK ALONE ATOP CENTRAL DIVISION

Chicago Tribune

The work and perseverance that went into a 25-5 run, capped by an eight-game winning streak, seem to give the White Sox more satisfaction than closing the first half being in first place following their 15-5 win over Kansas City.

"It's a testament to the 25 guys and the guys called up that never stopped believing even when the media was about ready to rip the whole team apart," Juan Pierre said. "It's good to be in first, but I want to be in first after the second half of the season. This is fine, but we have a lot of work to do."

"It's a good note to end on in the first half. I heard the fans saying 'first-place White Sox,' but the key is to have them yelling that at the end of September."

The Sox finished the first half with a

FROM WORST TO FIRST

The White Sox have gone from last to first in the AL Central in a little more than two months. Here's a look at their progress. REDEYE

» May 2: 10-15, last place, 6 games back

» May 21: 17-24, fourth place, 7.5 games back

» July 6: 44-38, third place, 1 game back

» Saturday: 48-38, second place, .5 game back

» Sunday: 49-38, 1st place

Sox outfielder Andruw Jones (center) is greeted at home plate by teammates Mark Kotsay (left) and A.J. Pierzynski after Jones slugged a three-run homer against Kansas City on Sunday. It was Jones' 400th career long ball. JOSÉ M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE

49-38 record, a half-game ahead of Detroit. They're in first place in the American League Central for the first time since May 1, 2009.

As of June 9, they were 9 1/2 games out of first place with general manager Ken Williams admitting one day earlier that "some changes needed to be made" after the Sox's 24-33 record.

Carlos Quentin, who hit two home runs to finish the first half with 19, treasured the work the Sox put into their amazing run.

"When you're playing every single day, every single game is important," Quentin said.

"You want to win that game at that moment. I can't say it's been fast. I know we've won. We've focused on winning every single day.

"We played hard every single day, and if you do that, you have a chance to be successful and that's what's happened. We've had good things happen for us."

Catcher A.J. Pierzynski said faith in the team never wavered.

"We have great guys on this team," he said.

"Nobody will ever question the guys we have on this team. We get along great. Everybody said, 'what's wrong with that team?' We all got along great and we all thought if we can get this thing going and turned around, we like where we're headed.

"So far it's been a lot of fun this last month and a half. We just need to keep it going these next two months and things will end up good. But it's a long way to go and we'll just see what happens."

There was plenty of hoopla over Andruw Jones hitting his 400th career home run in the third inning Sunday. But more important to the Sox's chances is that Jones went 7-for-21 on the Sox's recent home stand after having a .190 batting average following a 3-for-44 slump.

L.A. Dodgers 7, Cubs 0

The Cubs ended the first half of the baseball season 9 1/2 games out of first. That's not a good position to be in, but at least the Cubs could cling to the contention they're on the edge of a divisional race, which they couldn't only one week ago when they started the road trip. "The message is we've just got to win baseball games," manager Lou Piniella said. "We've been swinging the bats better. If we continue to swing the bats, it makes things a whole lot easier. We haven't had much success this year winning low-scoring games." Can the Cubs pull off a miracle streak? "I don't see why we can't play better and win with more consistency," Piniella said.

Hawks' Toews: Changes 'hurt'

Blackhawks captain Jonathan Toews said Sunday it is "very weird" to think about the team having already lost seven of the players who won the Stanley Cup to trades or free agency.

"It will be even tougher when we get together for the fan convention at the end of the month, and there will be all those missing faces," Toews told the Tribune in his first public comments on the team's offseason moves.

While Toews expected movement because of the salary cap, he did "not really" think there would be so much with more possible, now that San Jose has given an offer sheet to defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson.

"That's like adding insult to injury," Toews said, "and the more you think about, the more depressing it is."

"You've got to feel for those guys, especially for the ones that haven't gotten [their day with] the Cup yet and when they get it they already are part of another team."

Toews, celebrating with the Cup in his hometown Sunday, said he had not spoken with GM Stan Bowman about the situation.

Bowman "and everyone in the front office are trying to do the right thing for the future, but it is out of [players' control]," Toews said. "We know [Bowman] knows how special that team was, and he would do anything he could to keep it together."

"It hurts, but it would hurt even more if we had lost the Stanley Cup final."

» Andres Iniesta scored with four minutes of extra time remaining Sunday to give Spain a 1-0 win over the Netherlands and a first World Cup title. With the teams facing a penalty shootout in a game of few clear chances, Iniesta collected a sliding pass into the area from substitute Cesc Fabregas and smashed the ball past goalkeeper Maarten Stekelenburg and in at the far post.

» Lance Armstrong's bid for an eighth Tour de France title came to a screeching halt Sunday as the Texan finished almost 12 minutes behind stage winner Andy Schleck of Luxembourg.

Quick ways to prepare your seasonal farmers-market finds

By Metromix staff

It's easy to get ahead of yourself at summer farmers markets, buying up bags of fresh fruits and veggies only to get them home and blank on ways to prepare them. Expand your usual wash-and-eat routine with these quick, simple recipes from the people who know market produce best—vendors from local farms.

Garlic scapes

$2 per box, available through mid- to late July

Find them: Nichols Farm & Orchard at Daley Plaza Farmers Market, 50 W. Washington St. (7 a.m.-3 a.m. Thursdays)

Use them: Nichols staffer Steve Freeman recommends combining scapes (the shoots and flowers of garlic bulbs) with veggies such as potatoes or carrots. Toss with olive oil before roasting in the oven, on the stove top or even wrapped up in a packet of aluminum foil on the grill. Or snip off either end, dip in beaten egg and deep fry to a crisp.

Raspberries

$4 per basket, available through mid-July depending on weather

Find them: Piedt Farms at Bridgeport Farmers Market, 35th and Wallace streets (7 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturdays)

Use them: Going the dessert route is easier than you think with this recipe for raspberry cobbler from Piedt Farms' Mandy Piedt. Pour a half-cup of melted butter into a 7- by 11-inch baking dish. In a bowl, mix 3/4 cup of milk, 1 cup of sugar, 1 cup of flour and 1 1/2 teaspoons of baking powder and pour over the butter (do not stir). Pour 2 cups of raspberries over the batter and butter (do not stir). Bake at 350 degrees for 30-40 minutes, or until crust is golden. Let set and serve!

Russian banana fingerling potatoes

$6 per pound, available all summer

Find them: Nichols Farm & Orchard at Museum of Contemporary Art/Streeterville Farmers Market, Chicago Avenue and Mies van der Rohe Way (7 a.m.-3 p.m. Tuesdays)

Use them: For a cool potato-beans salad, farm co-owner Chad Nichols suggests boiling the potatoes for 5 minutes, then adding fresh green beans and boiling 5 minutes longer. Drain and add feta, goat or other crumbly cheese. Toss with vinaigrette to taste. Any small potato like this will do, including Rose Finn Apple fingerlings and German butterballs (also $6 per pound at Nichols' stand).

Pie in the sky

Go to metromix.com to see what we did with the sour cherries (currently at peak season) we picked up from Mick Klug Farms at the Lincoln Square Chamber of Commerce farmers market (4-8 p.m. Thursdays, Leland and Lincoln avenues).

BIRTHDAY!
Cancer

June 22-July 22
The eclipse at the start of the week could fill your head with crazy ideas. You'll start dating a vampire or wooing a pole dancer. You'll return to college for a degree in animal husbandry or take a class in cheese making at the local old folks' home.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

You'll be queen of the ball this week as Mercury heats up your social life. You'll be invited to countless parties, networking events and backyard barbecues. You also could have an excruciating run-in with an ex. Be warned.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Sometimes you have an annoying tendency to mix business with pleasure. Co-workers do not constitute an appropriate dating pool, period. Pluto is reminding you that there is a world of sexy singles out there who do not share a cubicle or a receptionist with you.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

The moon is increasing your sexual charisma. You'll want to have a 24-hour sexathon with your partner. If you're single, you'll prowls the clubs until you find a willing victim to return home to your lair. It's time for some raw animal passion.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You're picking up on your lover's thoughts through sexual telepathy. Whenever you make love with someone, a cord of energy connects you until that bond is broken. Right now, the sun is increasing your ability to sense your honey's true motivations and desires.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Someone who has been just a casual friend is intent upon becoming something more. Mercury is revealing this person's true feelings for you. That acquaintance who seems to ignore you most of the time secretly is dying to get together with you.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

With the sun still opposite your sign, tread lightly in the decision department. Don't propose to that girl you've known for three weeks. Don't move in with that guy who just broke up with his wife. Avoid needless melodrama and pointless complications.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You've always been a free spirit, and right now you need some space. A rebellious moon is reminding you that you detest being tied down. Your honey of the moment wants more of you, but you want less of her or him.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Venus is opposite your sign for a few weeks, heightening tensions between you and your honey. If you're single, you could be processing intense emotions from your last relationship. Do a little homework and think things through.

Aries March 21-April 19

With the moon opposite your sign, you're growing impulsive. You're thinking about calling up that married former flame for a discreet hookup. You're contemplating selling all your belongings and moving to Singapore. Sober up.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Your love life is feeling a bit more balanced, thanks to friendly Venus. You were ready to divorce your spouse or take a vow of celibacy, things were getting so weird. But now you're confident that you can improve your situation.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

You could develop an intense attraction to someone who is bad news. Jupiter has you lusting after that deadbeat dad who refuses to pay child support for his six children. Or you're longing for that drop-dead gorgeous girl with the IQ of a flea. Ouch.

'Idol' moment in the Windy City

about last night

LUIS ARROYAVE
larroyave@tribune.com

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

Something tells me "American Idol" Season 8 winner Kris Allen hated posing for a Tribune photo shoot more than anything Friday. Maybe it was the bored expression on his face during the shoot in the John Hancock building—or maybe it was because he said, "I hate this more than anything."

The "Live Like We're Dying" singer was dying for the photo shoot to end.

"I like interviews more than photos," Allen said before playing a free outdoor show in the John Hancock Center Plaza. "In an interview, you just talk."

The family-friendly concert—part of Gardens of The Magnificent Mile celebration—was one of two shows Allen played in Chicago on Friday. He performed at the more booze-friendly Old St. Pat's block party later in the day. Had Allen ever played a block party before where more people were raising cups than camera phones?

"No, I don't know, maybe," Allen said.

"When you play a crowd like that, they're there to have a good time. You're there to help them out with that. You play songs they know and they're set for the rest of the night."

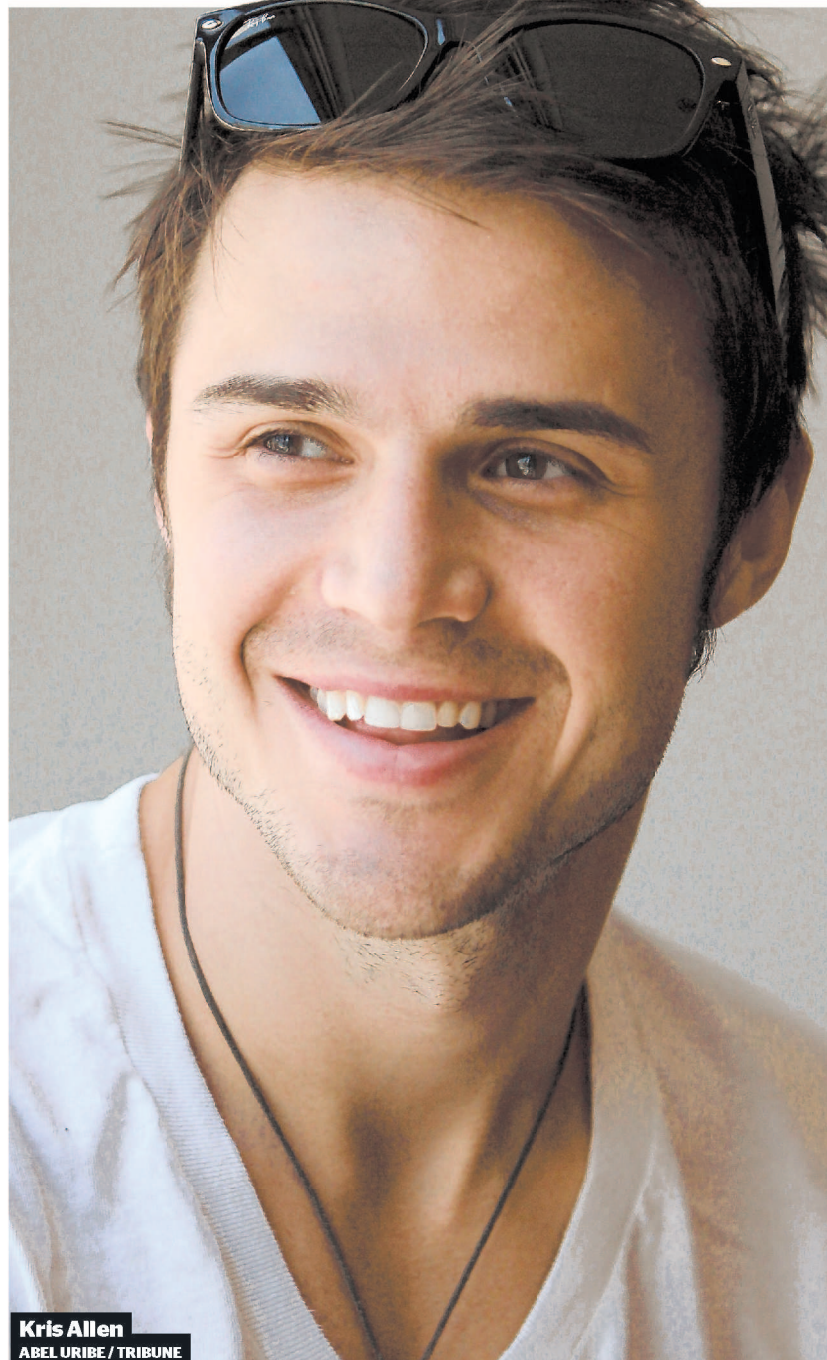

Allen beat out Adam Lambert to win "Idol" in May 2009 and released his self-titled debut album in November. He's experienced what Season 9 winner and Mount Prospect native Lee DeWyze is going through ever since his "Idol" win in May. Allen called the first two months after his win "crazy."

"You don't know what's going on," Allen said. "It's big stadiums every night in front of a ton of people, lots of press, lots of answering questions. After the album is done—that's when it's OK to take a break."

DeWyze hasn't had the same success as past Idols—his single sales were below expectations and eight dates from the "Idol" cast tour were recently canceled—but Allen feels he'll be OK.

"I don't know exactly what's going on," Allen said. "As long as Lee works hard, does what he loves, does his thing, I think he'll be completely fine."

SIGHTINGS

» The newest Bull, Carlos Boozer, partied at Market on Friday. Teammate Derrick Rose hit the West Loop bar and restaurant on Thursday.

» Naughty by Nature rapper Treach had drinks at The Cedar Hotel on Friday and returned for lunch on Saturday.

» The guys from O.A.R. hung out at the Underground on Friday and at Bull & Bear on Saturday. The Blackhawks' Duncan Keith was at Bull & Bear on Wednesday.

Scottie Pippen
TRIBUNE FILE

» Scottie Pippen sat in the VIP area of District Bar on Friday.

» The Dallas Mavericks' Shawn Marion dined at Hub 51 on Friday before heading downstairs to Sub 51.

» Ed Swiderski was spotted at the Stimulus Social Club's monthly charity event at Stanley's in the West Loop on Thursday, the same day it was reported he and his "Bachelorette" fiancée, Jillian Harris, had broken up.

A.J. Pierzynski
SCOTT STRAZZANTE / TRIBUNE FILE

Catcher pitches drinks for charity

Before I could ask A.J. Pierzynski a question at the White Sox Celebrity Server event on Thursday, the Sox catcher—dressed in a black Texas de Brazil vest—had a question for me: "Want me to make you a drink?"

I don't normally drink on the job, but I accepted just so I could watch Pierzynski channel his inner Sam Malone at the White Sox charities fundraiser.

If this had been college or a wedding reception, I would've ordered drinks only from Pierzynski the rest of the night.

"It's a caipirinha," he said after asking a restaurant employee what the drink was called. "It's the specialty drink of the house. It goes down real smooth."

Hitched!

It was wedding weekend for several celebs. Emily Blunt and John Krasinski wed in Como, Italy, on Saturday, "The Office" actor's rep told usmagazine.com. Blunt wore a custom cream chiffon Marchesa gown with embroidered detail. Also getting married Saturday were Carrie Underwood and hockey player Mike Fisher, her rep confirmed to usmagazine.com. "We could not feel more blessed to have found each other and to have shared this day with our friends and family that mean so much to us!" the newlyweds said in a statement they signed "Mike & Carrie Fisher." The two got married at a luxurious hotel in Georgia. Actress and former MTV VJ LaLa Vazquez and NBA star Carmelo Anthony wed in New York on Saturday, her rep confirmed. And finally, people.com reports funnyman Martin Lawrence and his longtime girlfriend, Shamicka Gibbs, were married in an intimate wedding Saturday at the actor's home in Beverly Hills.

Move your butt

Gwyneth Paltrow says being a mom is no reason to be out of shape. Paltrow, who admits that losing weight after baby No. 2 was tough, works out two hours a day to stay sexy. She tells the Press Association: "Every woman can make time—every woman—and you can do it with your baby in the room. There have been countless times where I've worked out with my kids crawling around all over the place."

Norton

Don't make him angry

Edward Norton may be looking for revenge. Marvel Studios confirms it's searching for someone else to play Dr. Bruce Banner in Joss Whedon's "The Avengers," which will star Robert Downey Jr.,

Scarlett Johansson, Chris Evans and Samuel L. Jackson. Norton starred as the Hulk in the studio's 2008 hit and was expected to reprise the role. "Our decision is definitely not one based on monetary factors, but instead rooted in the need for an actor who embodies the creativity and collaborative spirit of our other talented cast members," Marvel said in a statement. Ouch. Norton's agent has fired back, calling the statement "offensive" and saying Norton was excited to be a part of the great team.

Next 'Bachelor' victim?

"Bachelor" host Chris Harrison recently told "American Idol" cutie Casey James he should be the next bachelor to appear on the ABC reality show. OK! magazine revealed James said he wouldn't rule out the idea. "I'll try anything once," he said. "I'm always up for a new experience."

UNIVERSAL PICTURES

THE DIGIT

That's the amount "Despicable Me" (left) amassed in theaters this past weekend, making it No. 1 at the box office. "The Twilight Saga: Eclipse" was No. 2 with $33.4 million.
